News of the Day.

Rumors of peace and peace conferences are the order of the day. According to these rumors Commissioners are coming and Commissioners are going. All of which may betoken much or little. This much seems to be pretty certain, that Mr. Blair, Sr., and Gen. Singleton, a distinguished Democratic politician of Ill., have gone to Richmond, and the prevailing opinion seems to be that they are going with a view of ascertaining the feeling of the authe of asceraming the leeling of the authorities at Richmond on the question of peace. And in connection with this it is said that three Commissioners on the part of the Confederacy are at the headquarters of Gen. Grant. Their names are said to be Mr. Orr, of South Carolina, Mr. Gilmer, of North Carolina, and Mr. Alexander H. Stephens, Vice President

We really do trust that the same piece of shocking foolery is not about to be repeat-ed. These two fresh spies (for Yankee spies go in pairs like Nisus and Euryalus,) have arrived some time since at Grant's headquarters, and have no doubt applied, as the first pair did, for leave to visit Rich-mond; not that they are commissioned by any body or have any thing whatsever to say body, or have any thing whatsoever to say, in the slightest degree bearing on public affairs. In one respect this pair differ from Kirke and Jacquess—whereas the latter were quite unknown, the Blairs are well known; and what is known of them is most decidedly unfavorable. Herein Jacquess and Kirke had the advantage. These Messrs. Blair are and have long been—to sum them up in one word—a pair of regular Washington politicians and speculators in elections and jobbers in the public money. It is impossible to conceive any two Yankees in all the North more unlikely to have an honest errand in coming to Richmond at this day: any given couple of Hebrew blockade-runners would be more welcome visitors; because they would at least smuggle into us certain useful commodities. It is not possible just yet to say what snare lies hid under their expedition, or what object of disuping and treason is to or what object of disunion and treason is to be served by it; but of one thing we are very sure—these men, not being commissioners authorized to open negotiation be-tween Government and Government, are spies. Will the Government authorize their visit? Or has it already done so? We can very well guess beforehand what are to be the topics of discourse with the Blairs, both sire and son, in case they are granted an audience—they have nothing to propose, but will merely give it as their private opinion, that unconditional submission, abolition of slavery, destruction of the Confederate Government, army and debt, might still save us from utter annihilation —that Lincoln is full of compassion and loving kindness; having no pleasure in the death even of "rebels;" and that true repenthe bold policy of confiscating the property of the church and appropriating it to the uses of the State. It seems he has not waited to hear the decision of the Pope in waited to the matter.

DIED.

DAVIS-In the city of Baltimore, November 28, 1864 of c. ngestion of the lungs, Lieutenant Joseph H. Davis in the 44th year of his age. Mr. D. was, before the war, one of our leading me-chanics, and for skill, taste and beauty of finish was not excelled by any in the city, as many fine buildings, nov lifting their stately domes as standing monuments to his memory, will bear me witness. The quality of his work was of a superior order. He was notab'y neat in person ard all that passed under his supervision bore the impres of the man. Hence, though his contracts were a metime extensive, his profits were small. Mr. D. was not one of those shrewd, long-sighted, watchful-and-suspicious-o-everybody business mer, who never fail to make money and to keep what they make. Such was his sense of honor and justice that his noble spirit cou'd not steep to judge another before the time. With him all were honest until proven otherwise. He was a laborious, straight-forward business man, looking after the interests of others equally with his own. If he had a fault it was serving others to much and himself too little. H's heart was in his hand and his hand was open to all who asked his aid. Mr. D. was married September 21st, 1843, to Emma De Garris, and never did two more congenial spirits meet-never did affection c ment two hearts in closer union. He was a devoted husband, singularly tender and kind, and a true and warm-hearted friend. He connected himself with the M. E. Church, South, i December, 1847, during the administration of Rev. Saml.

D. Baldwin, then in charge of Shelby Street Station, Louisville Conference. Mr. D. joined as a seeker of religion, and on the first Sabbath in the following Januar; found peace in believing; and from that time until his death he was a zealous, consistent Christian, growing in grace and strengthening in his Christian life. Mr. D. was selected by the Chutch, in 1851, to succeed Rev. Jacob Goodson, who was at that time called from the leadership of class No. 6 to the ministry. He was a very acceptable and efficient class leader and continued to perform the duties of that responsible position until 1861, when he entered the Federal army. At the commencement of our national trouble Mr. D. took a firm stand against the rebellion, and, with one or two others, raised a company for the 28th Kentucky infantry and was elected Second Lieutenant. He received ission and followed his regiment to the field. While with a portion of the 2sth, posted at Gallatin, Tenn., he was captured and paroled by John Morgan. He re-turned, shortly after, to Louisville and was ordered to Camp Chase. He was exchanged and returned to Louisville and being too feeble in health for service in the field e resigned, though with much reluctance. He shortly after obtained a commission as First Lieutenant in the Invalid, or Veteran Reserve, Corps, which last commission he received in the fall of 1863, and was placed in charge of one of the military hospitals of this city, and a few months subsequent to his death was appointed Assistant Provest Marshal. About the middle of November he obtained a furlough for ten days and started on a mi sion of mercy in behalf of a young friend, and was ove-taken in Baltimore, before he reached Washington, with the fatal malady that had been threatening him before. Though among strangers, whom he had never seen before, nothing that could contribute to his comfort or tend to his recovery, but was heartily and lavishly bestowed by that large hearted Christian gentleman, Mr. Joshua Register, and his amiable family, whose Samaritan kindness brings the friends and relatives of Mr. Davis under a largedebt of gratitude. Those dear, frienily strangers will long be held in affectionate remembrance, especially by his bereaved widow and orphan child. On November 21st, Mr. D. attended class with Mr. Register at Monument street Church, and, by request, led the class, which was done with his usual warmth and spirit-

The locomotive used to draw the passenger train to Lexington was placed on the main track, about four o'clock, in readiness for the engineer to attach, when, by some means, it got started and ran up the track without an engineer. When the conductor got ready to start his train he found the engine non est. Preparations were made to switch engine, but it jumped off the turntable and could not be placed on the track. An engineer was sent up the track on foot and found the runaway engine at the crossing of the Lexington turnpike. The train for Lexington was detained about an hour and a half,

BATTLE ANNIVERSARY, -Sunday, January 8th, was the fiftieth anniversary of the battle of New Orleans, when British military power received its most crushing defeat since the surrender of Cornwallis. The British were the attacking party, and were cleaned all out by the "hunters of Kentucky" and Tennessee, and the heroic free colored men of Louisiana, under the leadership of the immortal Jackson. This anniversary was for many years celebrated by the Democracy; but since the hero of New Orleans, with his unflinching Union principles, has been laid on the shelf for such men as Buchannan and Vallandigham, the 8th of January has fallen into neglect among Democratic devotees. It deserves fresh commemoration as a proof of the capacity of the American race for defending the cause of liberty on the battle-

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—The Richmond Whig of the 10th has the following items from Savannah:

Wednesday next.

The House resumed the consideration of a proposed slavery amendment. Chilton L. White believed in the qualified sovereignty of States, and argued that there was no power in the Constitution to affect the statement of the consideration of a proposed slavery amendment. Chilton L. ute of slavery, as its regulation and management were within the province of the States where the institution exists.

Mr. Smithers, of Delaware, was satisfied that the pending measure was both a con-stitutional and beneficial mode of amend-

Mr. Townsend opposed the amendment and contended that it was wrong to con-clude that those who were opposed to the amendment were enemies to the Union. His constituents favor the basis of the Crittenden resolutions.

Mr. Cravens believed that slavery would finally die if the gentlemen would address themselves to putting down the rebellion; it would have been over now if nothing had

een said about slavery, Mr. Brownell, of Pennsylvania, said the question was passed upon by the people last lection.

Mr. Pendleton, of Ohio, maintained that Mr. Pendleton, of Ohio, maintained that the right of the amendment was limited in two ways: First, by the letter of the Constitution; second, by the spirit, intent and scope of that instrument, and the ideas upon which it was founded. It was not an abstract question, but a question compact. A change could not be made subverting the Constitution and encouraging a monarchy, because republicanism was the base of our system, and to overthrow it is not to amend. system, and to overthrow it is not to amend but to subvert the Constitution. If threefourths of the States pass such amendment, and Rhode Island alone should be the dis-senting State, she would have the right, and it would be her duty to resist by force, and her cause would be sacred. The amendment would be binding in moral law, and therefore void in part. States cannot determine the affairs for others. The Constitution must be our only guide.

After some discussion between Messrs. Pendleton and Jenkins, of Rhode Island, the House adjourned. WASHINGTON, Jan. 12. Mr. Elliott introduced a substitute for the bill to reorganize the rebel States, providing that none of them shall be allowed to resume their political relations auntil the loyal citizens organize a government, re-publican in form, and forever prohibiting slavery; and further providing that Louisana shall resume her political relations "nder her Constitution adopted in 1864. The substitute was ordered to be printed.

The House discussed the proposed amend-Mr. Smith, of Kentucky, felt it to be his duty to lay aside all personal considerations and prejudice, and devote himself alone to his country, his whole country; and nothing, he contended, was so destructive to our peace as the doctrine of State Rights, which had been proclaimed in this House. This doctrine, if carried out, would subvert all the principles of government and republicanism, and bring us to the position of perfect despotism and ruin. He denied the argument of the gentleman from Ohio, Mr. Pendleton, that the right of revolution exists at all times, but admitted that any people would be justified in resorting to the right of revolution whenever the Government becomes so oppressive or despotic as not to be borne, and when there are no other means of redress, yet gentle-Mr. Smith, of Kentucky, felt it to be his are no other means of redress, yet gentle men here are bold and audacious enough to go a step beyond the most ultra Southern fire-eaters. It was duty of Congress to pass this joint resolution in order to afford the people an opportunity of passing upon the amendment, and it was the duty of the peopleto adopt it. We should destroy slavery, root and branch, as soon as possible. We must have the Union without slavery, and no vote of his should be given but for that which looks to the utter, absolute and unconditional abolition of slavery throughout the United States. He thanked God he had seen the day when we can wipe out slavery, and Kentucky according to and Kentucky acquiescing in the act will stand among the proudest States of the

Mr. Smith spoke of the advantages which would result from free labor in the South both in an economical and particle south the political creed, while the Opposition, at HARRISBURG, PA., January 12.—The following dispatch was received by Governor Curtin this morning:

The North would have yielded, and his, Cox's, Information was that the South would not have held back. He proceeded to argue why, in a state of war, he was op-posed to making such a radical amend-ment, although not questioning the power

If he thought that by voting for the unendment he could save the Union, he amendment he could save the Union, he would do so though all the devils North and South should expend their wrath against him, but he would appeal to the gentlemen to say whether he was bound to vote for it if he believed its adoption would prolong the war. PORTLAND, Jan. 11.—The Times publishes a letter from Lord Wharncliffe in response to Mr. Seward's refusal to receive the Liverpool fund. Wharncliffe quotes Northern papers to disprove Seward's statement that prisoners are not suffering unusual priva-tions. He denies that the funds were mainly contributed by those trading with the South, and says the movement was almost entirely carried out by Southern ladies in England, and that the refusal will not practically effect the distribution of the funds.

The Times contrasts the frank and tem-

The Times contrasts the frank and temperate language of President Lincoln in his message with the proclamation of General Dix and the resolutions offered in the Senate by Mr. Chandler. It says: In Congress we are charged with complicity in assassination and pillage while the military commander threatens our territory with invasion, but the Chief of the Republic does instice to both Canada and England. to both Canada and England.

We gladly receive his views as those which time and reason will commend to the American people. War between America and England would be the simplest and most formidable intervention in behalf of the South which Mr. Davis could desire. The Times especially recommends this point to the consideration of Americans. It adds: It has long been surmised that the Confederates have been rather allured than deterred by prospects of internal embroilment arising out of their schemes. If, besides escaping with cruisers and plundering banks, they could bring a powerful enemy on the back of their foe, it would be an enormous gain to them. Perhaps some of them are now looking to the St. Albans raid, and have hopes of this kind. It is much wiser to disappoint them than to play their game.

The Federals may assure themselves that not even the capture of Nashville nor the defeat of Sherman would satisfy the South defeat of Sherman would satisfy the Soun-half as much as a rupture with this coun-try, which certain Northern politicians are incessantly advising. a peace mission, with the approval of the President, is General Singleton, of Illinois. He preceded Blair a day or two. It is said the rebel Congress adopted, in secret session, the resolution to appoint peace comsion, the resolution to appoint peace commissioners, and they have been selected and sent to Grant's headquarters. Messrs. Orr, of South Carolina, Gilmer, of North Carolina, and Alexander H. Stephens, are of the commission. It is also said that Grant has telegraphed that Stephens has solicited a pass through his lines to visit Washington.

It is known that Blair goes to Richmond with the full knowledge and consent of the President, and is clothed with authority requisite to open negotiations with Jeff. Davis, with a view to restore peace, and the rebel vesterday, with scant sixteen feet water in the canal in the evening by the mark. During the previous twenty-four hours it had risen two feet at the head of the falls, and nearly six feet at Portland. The weather was clear and pleasant for the season, though freezing in the shade. On the falls last evening there were fully twelve feet water, which was enough for all navigable purposes, and the river then rising a little less than an inch per hour.

At Pittsburg at noon yesterday the river was falling with 16 feet water in the chan-nel at the highest point. Here it is fully four feet below the last high tide.

At Cincinnati yesterday the river had risen two feet in the twenty-four hours ending at noon, and we think the bulk of the rise will be felt here to-day. The most of the rise at this point was from the Kentucky and Licking rivers, and we think the river here will be falling before the Pittsburg rise reaches this point.
